He kindly furnished the following facts regarding stage couching and events which occurred along the highway:

There was at one period eleven different lises running, the oldest and most prominent of which being the one owned by Daniel Moore, a gentleman who was known by every driver and hotel keeper from one end of the road to the other.

THE JUMBO CIGAR.

ommissioner Mason's First Decision—Not Cigars, but Smoking Tobacco—Other Washington Matters. ashington Dispat;h, April 15.

Internal Revenue Commissioner Masor to-day made one of his first rulings, which is interesting on account of being the first of the kind ever made, and als on account of the interests it affects.

There is a large cigar known to the trade as the "Jumbo" cigar. The gentrade as the "Jumbo" cigar. The general public very seldom see it. In fact, only on the stage where the light comedy man comes on smoking it and throws it into the flies, where it alights with a "dull thud," is it ever produced. In reality it is used in pipes, being crumbled, and is not smoked as a cigar. It is nearly as thick as a man's wrist, and a thousand of them contain 160 pounds of tobacco. One thousand of the average cigars contained between twenty and twenty-five pounds of tobacco. The tax on smoking tobacco is eight cents per pound; on cigars $3 per 1,000. By selling these "Jumbo" cigars as cigars the manufacturer is able to get 160 selling these "Jumbo" cigars as cigars the manufacturer is able to get 100 pounds of smoking tobacco on the market by paying a tax of $3, whereas he should pay a tax in round numbers of $13. In this way the Government is defrauded out of $10 on every 1,000 of defrauded out of $10 on every 1,000 of these cigars sold.

In 1887 under the direction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, suit was begun against one of the manufac-turers of this kind of a cigar, but was dropped by order of one of the Deputy Commissioners. The matter was brought to Mr. Mason's attention this afternoon, and after a long consultation he ordered run. Just when the Supreme Court will adjourn is not exactly known.

Solicitor-General Jenks told a correspondent this afternoon that he had hoped to start for home about the first of May, but was unable to tell anything to a certainty as to when he could get off. He hoped at least by the middle of May. He has received no notification as to who his successor will be, and with this the Department of Justice is going very slowly and are trying to see if they can't find some man holding the same relations to the Attorney-General that the Attorney-General holds to the President. In other words, Mr. Miller would like a personal friend in that position. INTELLIGENCER OFFICE, WHERLING, Tuesday, April 16.

A Possible Explanation.

"When the stages were within about a mile of town the excitement between the rival lines became intense, and then it was that all minor considerations were absorbed in the great object as to who would reach the destination first, no regard being paid to horse flesh. It was no uncommon occurrence that one or more horses were killed from over driving. This is little to be wondered at however, when a proprietor would instruct the manipulator of the ribbons as follows: "I'll find the horses; you find the silk."

"Mr. Moore, being the proprietor of the oldest line, was determined not to be excelled; so he had a road opened at his own expense. It was about a mile in length, and is estimated to have cost him nearly $2,000."

As this was the principal highway before the days of the iron horse, all the leading men of the country of that period passed through this place. Mr. McDaniel related a story about Gen. Twenty Pieces of Bone.

Taylor, which has never heretofore been published.

"When Gen. Taylor was going over this route, on his way to be inaugurated as President, a large delegation of citizens of this place came out there for the purpose of escorting him to town. Jack lailsh was driving the General's state, and when within a short distance he noticed the large crowd at the Rankin house, which was nearly opposite the McDaniel house. So he drove up to the latter house, and let the General out. He was here over an hour before he was discovered by the crowd.

"Taylor was attired in a home-spun coat and pantaloons, which were decidedly the worse for wear, and had a pair of white stockings drawn over his shoes. His hat had been at one time a black silk, but through age faded to an ugly brown. He had eyes like an eagle.

"During his address to the citizens of this place his voice failed him and he was completely evercome."

The matter was brought to Mr. Mason's attention this afternoon, and after a long consultation he ordered that suit be brought sagainst each manufacturer to recover the difference in tax on all ''Jumbo' cigars manufacturers who make this brand of cigars, and the amount which will be recovered will go well up into the thousands. Mr. Mason's was surprised to find that the matter had not been pushed before, and said that a little common-sense would show anyone that the ''Jumbo' exans tactgar, but merely smoking tobacco put up in that form with attempt to defraud.

Mr. Mason's office for the first time since he has taken the oath was virtually empty of office-seckers.
